“ At first, I’m certain as for many, this harsh reality was unacceptable. Personally, I would cling to the idea... that he’d just come back home. But, as the hours and days pass I’m left with only the reflection of my dear friend.

In closing thought, standing graveside with his friends and family, I was given the privilege of putting into words one attribute of Adam which mostly described him, to me. At the time, I found myself emotionally overwhelmed and could not finish. So, this I now share.

Through much tribulation, beginning from an early stage in adolescence, Adam realized the importance of one of God's greatest gifts to man. The Gift of Free Will. And, throughout his life he was determined in making certain that nothing, or no one, would take that from him.

Those that knew Adam can attest to his strong will and determination. Not only did he appreciate this gift, but he embraced it. He not only embraced it, but he understood it, as if he’d seen its greatness through the eyes of our creator.

For, you see... Free Will grants new options. These options spring forth Inspiration. And, the inspiration is what motivates you and I to bring about new Hope.

Adam's expression for New Hope could not be made more obvious than in the line of work he chose. This young man literally stood sentry at Death's Gate so that others might have New Hope.

God speed, Adam. ##imported-begin##James Mann##imported-end##

“ I’m very glad to have met Adam, he was a pleasure to work with and had obviously been raised by upstanding parents. I had the pleasure of working a couple of shifts with Adam just a few weeks ago. He was very professional and confident in the way he treated his patients. On one call in particular, he helped an elderly patient sort out her medications, getting rid of out of date and unused prescriptions etc. He was patient, considerate and encouraging to her as we took care of her. I share in your loss.##imported-begin##Randy Hilton##imported-end##
