Well as his only biological child it would have been nice if someone would have told me he passed away.

“Daddy and I never got along for more than a day or two. Although he and I we're not blood, he was my Dad, the only Dad that I ever knew. Love is love, even when it's complicated. We fought, we disagreed, at times even felt like strangers. But no matter the distance, he was still my Dad and he called me son. Now that he's gone, the ache of his absence, I feel it in my whole being. Not just grief, it's the weight of every word said, and the words we didn't say. I miss him in that I had no idea of how he kept us, me, together, sane and safe. In ways only a son could know. I love you Daddy. I wish.....
